It began back in 2006 with an idea to give music listeners a place to go to for netaudio/netlabel music recommendations. The idea was to bring the promotional compilation to the netaudio world. It was a simple idea, compile 10-12 incredible Creative Commons licensed tracks into a professionally produced package — available in multiple high-quality formats with complete high-resolution album art and a PDF containing extensive liner-notes. Would netaudio artists and netlabels go for it? Would they be willing to provide lossless copies of the tracks for inclusion on a promotional compilation? With the premiere release “netBloc Vol. 1: The Opening Salvo”, the idea came to fruition. netBloc volume 1 was the first of many to come that would set an example of how an album should be released digitally. If only the majors GOT this.

What you'll hear on this release is an eclectic collection of completely independent netaudio from around the world — Austria, Germany, Italy, Spain, Switzerland & United States. Whether you dig blues, hip-hop, rock, pop, electro-pop or dub... it's quite likely you'll find something that'll work it's way into your soul and not let go!
